

ABSTRACT

A massage glove having a plurality of vibratory motors secured within it on the palm side. The glove employs small vibrator motors located within the glove fingers. The motors are of a size and weight such that ordinary movement of the therapist's fingers within the glove in traditional massaging movements is not hampered. A heating element may be included in the glove for applying heat in addition to the vibration and the more traditional massage.